

FY2017 Douglas County Solicitation

Questions and Answers

1. Does a Certificate of Occupancy qualify as proof of compliance with all federal, state, and local fire, safety and health codes?

According to local municipal court code inspector offices, it does not qualify as current proof of fire, safety, and health code compliance.

2. Are supplies for urine collection, sweat patch collection, and breathalyzer provided to the vendor?

Supplies for urine collection and sweat patch collection are provided. Breathalyzers are not provided.

3. When pricing for urine collection, should the price only include collection and not supplies?

Yes, the price for urine collection should only include the cost of urine specimen collection as the U.S. Probation Office provides all necessary supplies. All prices should include all of the requirements under each project code listed.
